The energy complex moved higher today as a late morning rally in crude oil and gasoline lifted prices. Markets seemed to finally respond to another day of higher equities prices as well as a weaker dollar and anticipation of Hurricane Sally's impact on the Gulf Coast. Reports from the federal Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement (BSEE) had 149 platforms, roughly 497,000 bpd of oil output, had been shut in as well as the closing of several ports ahead of the storm. Gains were kept somewhat in check as the International Energy Agency (IEA) released their forecast for 2020 which downgraded fuel demand in the second consecutive month. At the close, crude oil strong session today added $1.02 to close above $38 to $38.28, gasoline moved $0.0313 higher to $1.1381, and distillate climbed out of red figures by adding $0.0059 to $1.0993.
