Oil and refined product futures held onto gains from late-morning trading with analysts weighing the effects of the coronavirus situation in India and additional headwinds if Iran's oil sanctions are lifted, against the increase in consumer demand expectations in the U.S. and China. WTI futures rose $0.91, not able to quite reach last week's high, closing the session at $64.49. Heating oil increased by $0.0295 to $1.9519 and RBOB finished higher by $0.0252, settling at $2.1015.
